Summary

Jimena and I met at the park down the street and walked around the pond at the park together. Jimena stated "did you hear that my mom apparently broke up with Jaime? I haven't seen him around, but I doubt they are broken up for good." Jimena expressed that it is a pattern she has seen play out repeatedly where her mom breaks up with Jaime and after a few months the two of them are back together. She also told me that she heard that her mom failed a drug test. She stated "no surprise there, I knew that would happen. She never stays clean." I asked her about how she felt her visits were going with her mom and she shared still dreading them because her mom will never accept her. She stated "my mom will only love me if I pretend that I am not a lesbian. She doesn't love the real me." Jimena shared that she really wants Lisa to become her guardian.

I asked Jimena about how she was feeling about Israel potentially moving to Missouri. Jimena shared that she felt sad about it and was going to miss him.

I asked Jimena about school. Jimena said it was ok, but that her final math grade was not good.

I asked Jimena about how counseling was going for her since we last spoke. She shared things had improved with her counselor and that she had chosen to start opening up to her. She explained that the counselor had been helpful in processing her feelings about her mom. She also shared that the counselor was teaching her "to love myself for who I am". She stated feeling supported in her identity. She also shared that she was practicing breathing exercises, drawing, and grounding skills.

Summary

I called Jimena's placement Lisa Jones and we spoke on the phone for 15 minutes. I asked her how she felt Jimena was doing with the recent news of her mother's relapse. She stated Jimena was trying to act like she did not care and knew along it would happen. However, it seemed to her that Jimena was hopeful this time would be different and seemed disappointed when she learned of the relapse. She stated, "I overheard her crying in her room after she found out. I have been encouraging her to speak to her counselor about her feelings regarding the relapse". I asked her how she felt counseling was going for Jimena. She shared noticing that she was starting to open up more about her feelings, and noticed she was continuing to practice her coping skills. I asked her how she was feeling about Josefina's relapse, and Lisa stated "I just want this emotional roller coaster to be over for Jimena. I have let DCS know that I want to be her guardian."

I asked Lisa how she felt school was going for Jimena. She stated Jimena ended the school year with poor grades in math. Lisa also expresses concern over Jimena being on track to graduate.

Relationship to Child: Placement

Summary

I met Miguel at his placement (Sandy and Bill Rogers) home. I asked Sandy and Bill how they noticed his development progressing and both stated that he was on track. The pediatrician had remarked that he had made substantial gains in his height and weight from his two-month check-up to his 4-month check-up. He went from being in the 15th percentile for height and the 10th for weight, to the 40th for height and 30th for weight. They also shared that he had started to push himself up on his elbows and forearms when in tummy time. Sandy stated she has been using the CDC Milestone Tracker App to closely monitor his development in addition to speaking about his development with his pediatrician at every check-up. His 6-month check-up is scheduled for next week.

Sandy stated the treating physician had reported not anticipating any long-term impacts to his health due to being born with NOWS.

I asked Sandy and Bill how their interactions were going with Josefina. Sandy reported that Josefina had been attending all of Miguel's doctor visits and that she had been video calling to read him bedtime stories every night. She remarked that Josefina seemed to be learning a lot from the parenting classes because she was becoming much more adept at recognizing Miguel's cues and taking action on them. Sandy also stated that despite how well those things were going she was worried about Miguel reunifying with her because she had recently failed a drug test. She expressed "it's heart breaking that even after all the progress, she still chose drugs over Miguel. How can we ever be sure that he will actually be safe with her?".
